

structures is made higher. That is, a specific unit comprising the structure of the film is made smaller and a film with minute structures is formed.

With the plasma display panel equipped with the protective film according to the present invention, effects of excellent sputter resistance and secondary emission characteristic can be produced. As a result, the operating life of the plasma display panel can be extended and the manufacturing cost can be reduced, and also the power consumption can be reduced.

206070-24466